Writing Skills Improvement Program
2016 Graduate Writing Institute

Overview

Each summer, WSIP offers the Graduate Writing Institute (GWI) for selected graduate students interested in improving their writing. Students of various disciplines work on a writing project individually and in small groups, participate in writing-related workshops, attend presentations on writing-related topics, and receive individual tutoring. Funded by the Graduate College, this program helps graduate students complete research papers and projects, conference presentations, grant proposals, theses, and dissertations.

Program Information

Who Is Eligible: Any enrolled University of Arizona graduate student is eligible. Acceptance to the program is competitive, however, and participants are selected through a careful review of their application materials.

Dates: June 6 – 24, 2016 (3 weeks)
Location: University of Arizona, Tucson
Times: MWF, 9:00am - 12:00pm, afternoons vary; TTh, varies
Fee: $20 application processing fee (does not guarantee acceptance into program)

Free application workshops / information sessions will be offered in late February and late March to anyone who would like more guidance in completing his or her GWI application.

“I found my tutor and all the instructors to be extremely helpful and supportive. I got valuable direction and advice. I felt encouraged about my writing and now I am excited to continue and finish.”

“Great! Awesome! Fun! Useful! I learned to read critically, to identify mistakes in my writing, and the amazing benefits of group work. I will use this experience as a teaching strategy.”

“It was an excellent opportunity for learning, interaction and communication. It was valuable because it connects individuals facing similar challenges and requirements to finish scholarly work and writing with the help of dedicated professionals.”
